Nov. 15, 1928.

Mr. James J. Collier,
Corpus Christi, Texas.

Dear Jim:

Your letter came duly to hand in August.

It seems like Texas will make a good cotton crop in spite of all. Evidently you can grow cotton much cheaper in Texas than we can in Georgia.

I received a letter from your mother this morning from Waco, stating that you had gone to Corpus Christi to locate there, hence reason I am addressing this letter there.

The cotton crop production in Georgia is about one-half. The farmers are all busted, and you cannot credit a farmer in Georgia and get your money; that is, if he depends on the income from the farm. The general business in Georgia is dull. Cotton mill business is dull. There seems to be a lots of money for sport, frolic, automobiles, and road development, but the money going into commercial channels is very small.

I trust you and your wife are well and that you will some day make us a visit. It would pay you to see the old country where your grandfather was born. I trust Ludie's health has improved by this time.

Sometime I am coming to Texas, and when I do I will do my best to get over in your section.

With sincere regards to all the family and best wishes to your self and Ludie, I beg to remain

Yours very truly,

JCC:S

J. C. COLLIER.